

Texas Youth-Friendly Initiative

In Texas, an estimated 1 million youth do not have access to health care and a baby is born to a teenage mother every 18 minutes. Texas also imposes significant barriers against teens accessing confidential health care. Because Texas laws are complex and difficult to follow, medical professionals often report a lack of understanding on minor consent and confidentiality, and the circumstances under which they are allowed to treat youth. These complexities create roadblocks for young men and women seeking to access trusted, confidential care.

Adolescents are more likely to use sexual and reproductive health services when providers and the clinic environment are friendly and welcoming, when services are well-known and adolescents actively encouraged to use them, and when there is community support for these services. The TYFI promotes all of these critical aspects of effective interventions.

The Texas Youth Friendly Initiative tackles barriers to access by leveraging the research and findings of global and national experts to apply to Texas's unique demographic and legal climate through a community of practice designed to build capacity and share experiences among peers from across the state. Participating clinics have access to assessments, tools and resources to build capacity in the following areas:

- ⇒ Access to Care
- ⇒ Adolescent Appropriate Environment
- ⇒ Confidentiality
- ⇒ Best Practices & Standards of Care
- ⇒ Reproductive & Sexual Health
- ⇒ Behavioral Health
- ⇒ Nutritional Health
- ⇒ Cultural Responsiveness
- ⇒ Staff Attitude & Respectful Treatment
- ⇒ Adolescent Involvement & Engagement
- ⇒ Parent Engagement
- ⇒ Outreach & Community Engagement

Upon completing an 18-month community of practice process, participating clinics have the opportunity to become certified Adolescent Champions, while also becoming a Wellness Hub for community youth.

Program Objectives

To increase the number of youth accessing high quality comprehensive health homes by:

- ⇒ Reducing community barriers for youth to access high quality affordable targeted health care within clinics.
- ⇒ Creating and operationalizing a statewide standard for youth-friendly services.
- ⇒ Developing and implementing change on the clinic systems level.
- ⇒ Increasing collaboration between youth-serving organizations and health care providers through formalized linkages.

Building a Consensus Model

A critical component will be using current systems and engaging key stakeholders.

- ⇒ Collaborating with international, national and local experts to develop statewide standards and protocols.
- ⇒ Identifying and building upon current clinical training programs.
- ⇒ Developing a 'Community of Practice' approach to impact health services provision at a system level.
- ⇒ Integrating sustainability measures from the start.
- ⇒ Measuring the impact of youth-friendly focus standards.
